WORK HAS CHANGED.

Most managers haven't had the chance to catch up.

Your teams expect more from the workplace than ever before.
More autonomy, more freedom, better work-life balance.

Most organisations are still asking managers to lead with outdated habits, inconsistent systems and no real playbook.

In this keynote, Dan Crompton shows new and experienced leaders how to reduce management friction in just 5 steps, so that you stop losing your best people.

Keynote Speech

STOP MANAGING LIKE IT'S 2008

The 5 Shifts Your Team Needs Today

IS THIS YOUR BUSINESS?

- Inconsistent management styles.
- Good people are leaving faster than you'd like.
- Managers feel overwhelmed and underprepared.
- Leadership habits haven't caught up with today's workplace.
- You want accountability without slipping back into command-and-control.

WHAT YOU'LL GET:

- A clear framework for the 5 shifts modern managers need to make.
- Practical tools to build more ownership and reduce management friction.
- Fresh insight into what today's teams expect from work.
- Stories, examples, and case studies that make the message stick.
- Immediate actions managers can use the next day.
- 45-minute, 60-minute and 75-minute versions available.

IDEAL FOR:

Leadership conferences, management events, culture programmes, leadership days, management development initiatives, and organisations that want to modernise management without adding more corporate waffle.

Expect sharp stories, useful tools, and the occasional detour via the Romans or The Golden Girls.
